Who says you can't mix indoor and outdoor design influences? At Casa Dos Chicos, in Sayulita, Mexico, the "walls" of this living room are the jungle, the mountains, and the Pacific coast. Vibrant throw pillows made from local textiles are tossed about the built-in banquette, and a constellation of hand-woven lanterns hangs from a palapa roof. In this era of technical design innovation (Sunbrella, for instance, has perfected the indoor-outdoor fabric), every space can benefit from a careful blend of styles and furnishings.
